This page was last modified on 16 July 2021, <https://kids.kiddle.co>

José Montserrate Feliciano, born September 10, 1945 in Lares, Puerto Rico. Is a Puerto Rican singer. A victim of hereditary glaucoma, he was left permanently blind at birth. Feliciano overcame the effects of his impairment to score many international hits.

He was first exposed to music at age 3. At five, his family moved to Spanish Harlem, New York City. At age 9, he played on the Teatro Puerto Rico. He could play various instruments (such as the accordion) by then he wanted to learn to play the guitar. To learn, he locked himself in his room for up to 14 hours a day to listen to 1950s rock albums but also classic guitarist like Segovia and Jazz player like Wes Montgomery, and had assistance from Harold Morris.

In 1966, he went to Mar Del Plata, Argentina, to perform at the Festival de Mar Del Plata. There, he impressed RCA Victor officials, who told him to stay there to record an album in Spanish.

In 1969, after two more successful albums, Feliciano had become a household name all over Latin America. Then, he moved to Los Angeles, to pursue his dream of becoming a household name in the United States also.
